Gender

When we look at gender it's more of an achieved role that focuses more on the behavior expected of a man or woman. We live in a society where we experience misgender and this happens because people realize that sex is given by birth and gender can be discovered. Sex can be very similar to gender and it also can be very very different. We distinguish gender from sex more from human actions, and it can be deeper by a sensitive category in parts of our body. A person is looked at and automatically be given a responsibility to perform an activity as a woman or man. When they are incompetent in one activity over the other, they will be discredited.

Gender basically composes choice limitations. True that there is a difference between a man and woman but we are only able to identify that sex as organs in our body and the physical appearances but less of a behavior.

As women were told how to act and they didn't have the choice to decide for themselves, society made women unopinionated and that they cannot claim equality with men. They have limited freedom, also no woman is as free as they wanted to be. There is a very effective way that women can be broken by other women. It's all in the image of beauty which is seen at a high level of beauty standards. The body is understood to be a resource for the experiences of self as we've read in "Doing Gender", Agne's appearance was the vision of a normal female. The fact that there are two tools of gender and it's either being in male or female. Agnes's status of the female was displayed by character until after she had her surgical constructed genitalia. She was seen differently because of choosing to be different. This cruel world itself helps inflate the amount of self-hatred and physical obsession. The fear of becoming old and having unusual skin textures has really Infected our liberty. Beauty is defined in many ways but the current division made an abnormal definition that established beauty in standards. Now most women feel the need to at least reach that definition.

This world is advanced and anyone can get most things they desire. The confusion has led women to be more concerned about cosmetic surgeries than their health just as it was stated in became the fastest-growing medical specialty.” This just clarifies that we are controlled by our bodies and that we live under pressure for perfection. A woman’s insecurities can be so powerful even the most powerful women with legal recognition and platforms have physical weaknesses. The media became more available and things that didn’t matter before matters now. Men in our society made most women believe that it’s normal to be in prison in their own minds and to keep their opinions to themselves. Therefore men too are apart of this problem.
